American and British Holidays

Christmas

- Due to their shared history, Great Britain and the United States celebrate a lot of similar holidays
 - Christmas is the annual holiday to commemorate the day Jesus Christ was born. It is celebrated on December 25. Father Christmas (in the UK) or Santa Claus (in the USA) brings gifts for children in the morning, and families traditionally eat a roast turkey meal. Boxing Day (December 26) is also a public holiday.

Easter

Easter is in March or April and commemorates the death of Jesus Christ and start of spring. It is another big family holiday. Children often paint and decorate eggs, eat chocolate eggs and seek for Easter Bunny.

Halloween

- Halloween, on October 31, is another shared holiday (in US and UK as well). Although it started in the UK, it became more popular in America. Typically people dress up in scary costumes like ghosts, devils and witches, and go „trick or treat“ – knocking on the doors and asking for sweets. They also carve pumpkins to create „jack-o'-lanterns“ and decorate their houses.

Guy Fawkes Night

Guy Fawkes Night or „Bonfire nights“ is a uniquely British celebration held on November 5 to commemorate the failed plot by Catholic rebel Guy Fawkes to explode British parliament in 1605. Typically It is celebrated with fireworks, bonfires and parties in the streets.

Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving is a special American holiday, celebrated on the fourth Thursday in November. Originally the first Pilgrims gave thanks to God with a feast to celebrate their successful first harvest. Now it is an important family get-together with a roast turkey meal.

Independence day

Independence Day, or July 4, is an importance day for the USA. It is an anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the day the country announced its independence from Great Britain in 1776. Today it is celebrated with fireworks, parades, barbecues, picnics and family gatherings.
