CHAPTER 1 - Two ships

Storyteller

The race began in the summer of 1910. On June 1st, in London, a black ship, the Terra Nova, went down the river Thames to the sea.

Captain Robert Falcon Scott

(standing on the Terra Nova, he smiled quietly)

Titus Oates

(standing on the Terra Nova, smiled at Scott)

What an exciting day, Captain. Look at those people. (point at people standing by the river) I feel like an important man.

Captain Robert Falcon Scott

(laughed)

You are important, Titus. And you are going to be famous, too. We all are. Do you see this flag? (he looked at the British flag at the back of the ship and smiled at Oates)

That flag is coming with us. In the Antarctic, I'm going to carry it under my clothes. We are going to be the first men at the South Pole, and that flag is going to be first, too!

Storyteller

Five days later, on June 6th, a man opened the door of his wooden house in Norway.

Captain Roald Amundsen

(at the same time as storyteller, standing outside the house for a minute. He smiled, and walked quickly away from the house to the sea. He got onto the ship, and talked and laughed quietly with his friend – Olav Bjaaland).

Olav Bjaaland

(smiled at Roald Amundsen)

North Pole, here we come, Captain.

Captain Roald Amundsen

Yes. Fram is going to the Arctic.

Storyteller

Everyone on the Fram was ready to go to the North Pole, to the Arctic. Amundsen wanted to go there, too. But first he wanted to go south. His friends didn't know that.

At midnight on June 6th, the Fram moved quietly away from Amundsen's house, out to sea.

CHAPTER 2 – The race

Storyteller

The Fram went to an island in the south of Norway. It was a very little island, with only one small wooden house, two trees – and nearly a hundred dogs.

Olav Bjaaland

Look at that! It is an island of dogs! There are dogs in the water, near the trees, on the house – dogs everywhere!

Hassel, Lindstrøm

(came out of the house)

Captain Roald Amundsen

Hassel, Lindstrøm! It's good to see you! How many dogs do you have for me?

Hassel

Ninety-nine, Roald. The best ninety-nine dogs from Greenland. And they're very happy! They don't work; they just eat and play all day! They're having a wonderful summer here!

Captain Roald Amundsen

Good, good. (laughed)

But that's finished now. Hej, Bjaaland! Stop laughing – come down here and help me. Let's get all these dogs onto the ship!

Storyteller

It wasn't easy. The dogs were fat and strong, and they didn't want to go on the ship. Then Fram went out to sea again.

Johansen

Why are we bringing dogs with us? We are going thousands of kilometres south, past Cape Horn, and then north to Alaska. Why not wait, and get dogs in Alaska?

Helmer Hanssen

Don't ask me. I don't understand it.

Storyteller

On September 9th, Amundsen called everyone to the back of the ship.

Captain Roald Amundsen

(stood quietly and looked at his men. Behind him there was a big map of Antarctica).

Boys, I know you are unhappy. Well, I'm going to answer all those questions now, today.

We wanted to be the first men at the North Pole. But last year an American found the North Pole. So America was the first to the North Pole, not Norway. Captain Scott, the Englishman, is going to the South Pole this year. He wants to put his British flag there. Well, boys. Do we want the British to put their flag to the South Pole first? Let's go to the South Pole, and put the Norwegian flag there before the British.

Olav Bjaaland

(laughed)

Yes. Why not? It's a ski race, isn't it, and the English can't ski! It's a wonderful idea, of course. Let's go!

Scénár 3 CHAPTER 3 – The Ponies

Storyteller

On October 27th, The Terra Nova arrived in Wellington, New Zealand.

Captain Robert Falcon Scott

(came off the ship)

Newspaper man

(walkend up to Scott) Captain Scott! Captain Scott! Can I talk to you, please!

Captain Robert Falcon Scott

Yes, of course. What do you want to know?

Newspaper man

Are you going to win?

Captain Robert Falcon Scott

Win? Win what?

Newspaper man

Win the race to the South Pole of course. It's a race between you and Amundsen now. Look at this!

(he gave to Scott a newspaper)

Captain Robert Falcon Scott

Give me that! (he said angrily!)

Newspaper man

Well, Captain Scott. Who's going to win this race? Tell me that?

Captain Robert Falcon Scott

This is stupid! It's not a race! I'm not interested in Amundsen, or in races! (walked back onto his ship)

Storyteller

Captain Scott had more more, more money than Amundsen, sixteen men, the motor sledges and ponies. But the ponies were old, and some of them were ill.

Titus Oates

(asked Scott) Where is their food, Captain?

Captain Robert Falcon Scott

Here! (he opened a door)

Titus Oates

(looked inside) We need more food than this, Captain Scott! These ponies are going to work in the coldest place on earth!

Captain Robert Falcon Scott

We can't take more food on this ship, Titus. But doesn't matter! They are the best ponies on earth.

Storyteller

Later that night, Oates wrote to his mum that Scott made a lot of mistakes and Antarctica is a very dangerous place.
